AT METROPOLITAN

Time This Season as Unhappy Elsa.

Wagner's "Lohengrin" was sung for the first time this season at the Metro-politan Opera House last evening. There was a time, as older operagoers will readily*recall, when the most meilifluous readily*recall, when the most mellifluous of all Wagner's lyric dramas was also the one most frequently heard. But changes in the state of vocal art have brought about modifications of public

Agar and Ogden Codman. taste.

In its infancy "Lohengrin" was regarded as a declamatory music drama, inimical to the most elegant style of singling. Now, with the exception of a few scenes it is accepted as an opera flowling with milk and honey.

In so far as New York is concerned taste.

In so far as New York is concerned the palmy days were those in which Lillian Nordica or Emma Eames and the De Raszkes were heard in it. The style of singing which dominated the stage in those days is not heard in the German operas at present. Very little of it is heard anywhere, but that is another story. story. The essential point at present is that the milk of "Lohengrin" is now mostly congulated and the honey too bard to flow.
